Headline:
Rain in the northwest. Rather windy but very mild.

Today:
Often cloudy with some outbreaks of rain in the north and west of the region and locally strong, gusty winds, especially over higher ground. Turning brighter in the southeast with bright or sunny spells developing through the day. Very mild. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud and patchy rain spreading slowly southeastwards overnight, though strong winds easing with time. Becoming chilly in the northwest by the end of the night as skies clear. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Thursday:
A dry and largely sunny day with mainly light winds. Cooler than Wednesday, though still feeling mild in the sunshine. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Dry with plenty of fine, sunny weather on Friday and over the weekend. A few morning mist or fog patches with some rural overnight frosts. Otherwise it will be mild.
